CHARGES IN WATERS

Chances Of Easing Already Strained Relations Dimmed

Official Denials and Congressional Resentment Over Nazi Allegations Are Heard

In Washington

By HOBART C. MONTEE

British United Press, Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
 WASHINGTON, March 30.—Official denials and congressional resentment of German charges that the United States had helped bring about the European war appeared today to have dimmed the possibility of an early easing of strained German-American relations.

ST. BONIFACE HEALTH AIDE IS SUSPENDED

Dr. A. Roy Allevy Failed To Report To Administer Inoculation

ST. BONIFACE, Man. March 30.—Mayor G. C. Maclean today announced the suspension of Dr. A. Roy Allevy, health aide, for failing to report on time at the city health office to administer inoculation against the current typhoid outbreak.

The mayor said Dr. Roy was not to be on hand for the night but "with several persons waiting for treatment he didn't turn up until 9 p.m.," the mayor said.

In an emergency the needs of the people must be the first consideration. No excuse could be considered under the circumstances as I felt it my duty to suspend Dr. Roy," Mayor Maclean said.

TYPHOID CASES GAIN
 Dr. M. Bowman of the Manitoba department of health today took complete charge of the typhoid emergency and Dr. Roy Allevy, St. Boniface will handle the inoculations, the mayor said.

The typhoid cases continued to gain in number with three new patients discovered during the last 24 hours. Of the 2 new in hospital, 24 are from St. Boniface and 25 are residents of the St. Ann district, 25 miles southeast.

Two deaths have been attributed to the typhoid outbreak.

SLIGHT HOPE FOR PEACE AT PRESENT TIME

Information Gathered By Welles Valuable At Later Date

WASHINGTON, March 30.—President Roosevelt said in a formal statement yesterday that there was "no immediate prospect for a viable peace in Europe" but that the information gathered ahead by Sumner Welles would be valuable when the time came for establishing peace.

The President read the statement at his press conference, following his second conference with Welles since the under-secretary of state returned from visiting European capitals.

NO PEACE PROSALS

"He has not received, nor has he brought back to me, any peace proposals from any source," the President declared.

He added that "even though there may be scant immediate prospect for peace in Europe, the information made available to this government as a result of Mr. Welles' mission will undoubtedly be of the greatest value when the time comes for the establishment of such a peace."

Departing from the text of his statement, the President said that "what they said was that there was scant immediate prospect for any end of the war."

The President said that "Welles' trip to Rome and the belated capital had resulted in a clarification of the relations between the United States and the countries which he visited."

KEY CONFIDENTIAL

He added that he believed it would "assist in certain instances" to reveal the confidential nature of the relations between the United States and the countries which he visited.

More "Frightfulness"

Here's further evidence of the ruthless warfare which the Nazis are waging.

It is the shattered light of a British east coast lightship after German bombing planes had attacked the ship and crew. These vessels are now armed and like the sturdy men aboard the travelers, the lightship crew will be able to give a good account of themselves the next time Nazi bombers approach.

ITALY REMAINS ANTI-BOLSHEVİK

ROME, March 30.—A wireless from the Italian government today said that Italy "remains anti-Bolshevik" and "insisted that a 'Rome-Berlin axis' was not a possibility of the near future."

This was interpreted in foreign circles as indicating that if Adolf Hitler suggested a new friendship between Rome and Moscow in his meeting with Premier Mussolini in the Brenner Pass, Italy's position would be clear.

Authoritative Italian sources here said that the Brenner meeting, if it might in fact bring about a new friendship between Germany, Italy and Russia.

SEATTLE CUTS DISCOUNT FOR CANADA MONEY

Merchants Are Advised To Start Discounting 20 Per Cent

SEATTLE, March 29.—The Retail Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce advised Seattle merchants yesterday to start discounting Canadian currency and silver 20 per cent today.

The bureau said the recommendation was because the Canadian Foreign Exchange Control Board raised that after March 20 currency and silver no longer will be redeemable for non-residents at the fixed rate of conversion. The action means that on and after March 20 silver and currency will be discounted at the prevailing rate on Canadian cheques, which is 20 per cent.

Discount on Canadian silver to now is 12 per cent, and on currency 11 per cent.

OTTAWA, March 29.—Foreign Exchange Control Board officials said yesterday action of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce in recommending merchants discount Canadian currency 20 per cent, commencing today was a natural development of a recent ruling of the board.

Formerly United States banks could ship currency back to Canada and receive the official rate of exchange for it, and thus gain an advantage. Effective tomorrow such Canadian currency in the hands of United States banks will not be redeemable in Canada at the fixed rate of conversion.

Action of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, however, has no effect on Canada's domestic currency situation, and United States currency may still be bought in Canada, subject to restrictions of the Foreign Exchange Control Board, at the prevailing official rate, for anyone wishing funds to travel in the United States or to make purchases there.

Beaverbrook Makes Fighting Defence of Britain's War Aims

LONDON, March 30.—Criticism of British war aims was answered yesterday by Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born publisher of the Daily Express.

In a special article released to newspapers of the United Kingdom and the United States, Lord Beaverbrook gave the lie to the charge that Britain is fighting not to keep Hitler down, but to maintain her domination of world trade.

"The British navy is the security of the freedom of the world," he wrote. "The navy is there to fight. That is why the great ships were built, and you cannot say at any moment that this is a war the English do not fight and at the same time get peace with security for Europe."

Of the charge that the blockade of neutral countries has brought no worse hardships to civilians than it has brought to the British, he wrote: "The blockade has been imposed on them and they would willingly lay down their arms now if she could get peace with security for Europe."

SEEK PEACE IN EUROPE
If the British were to lose the war through the lack of the blockade, some neutrals would be worse hard hit than the British. The main purpose of the blockade is to make such neutrals a party in Europe. "It is a plan which I did not advise," he wrote. "But now I must give my wholehearted assistance, my entire devotion, my complete support to a nation willing to make such sacrifices, to endure so fearfully, to suffer so terribly, to fight so bravely, to die so gloriously. It is for all of us an ideal. It is to further and extend the rule of Jesus and the law of the Gospels on the Mount."

At the end of his article Lord Beaverbrook declared that although he has worked in England for 10 years his part has mainly been that of the "friendly stranger," and his criticism of British foreign policy was always based on imperial considerations. He had never ceased to complain of Britain's "neglect of imperial issues."

But now that the British were engaged in a war which to them "is a great cause, a splendid act of courage, a magnificent example of high endeavor and high purpose," he said, he felt it his duty to make known to the world his arguments used against them which he had made.

FRENCH FIRE MOWS DOWN NAZI PATROL

German Infantry Attack Ambushed South Of Saarbruecken

PARIS, March 29.—French machine-guns in ambush south of Saarbruecken cut down the advance guard of a German infantry attack, killing the German commanding officer and several others, the French command reported today.

It said the Germans were sent out yesterday, under cover of a violent barrage, to attack the French flank, but that the ambush frustrated the advance. One German was captured in another patrol fight, the French said.

SHELL FOR SHELL
Greatly increasing German artillery fire west of the Vosges mountains and the Saar river was intended to wipe out several small villages occupied by the French, but French gunners replied shell for shell, military dispatches said.

In this central area, German reconnaissance planes were active, one being brought down in eastern France by anti-aircraft fire. The French said their aerial photographic flights over Germany continued unimpeded.

Today's artillery fire on both sides to the west of the Vosges and east of the Saar.

In the Saar region, enemy reconnoitering units were repulsed by our fire and we successfully laid an ambush.

"The enemy left several dead on the ground."

The War This Week

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Cable Editor

WHILE the "momentous events" in Germany's favor as assiduously forecast by the Berlin propaganda office failed to materialize, Allied diplomacy took the initiative in the thirtieth week of the war and promised vigorous measures to prevent the Balkan states falling within the enemy's orbit.

A "future line of action" was decided upon at a meeting in London of the Allied supreme command, and the British and French envoys in the Balkan capitals and Italy were summoned home for conference.

The day before, Premier Paul Reynaud of France had warned that "at this moment" Germany is ready for an attack on the economic independence of the Balkans and declared that France's answer will be to "wage war in all domains."

Hitler scheme fails
That some kind of hit Germany plan to promote an agreement between Italy and Russia, which is believed to have been the purpose of Adolf Hitler's visit to the Brenner Pass to confer with Premier Mussolini the previous week, seemed apparent when the Soviet foreign minister, Vyacheslav Molotov, failed to show up in Berlin.

The Germans early in the week had all announced his imminent arrival, handing out information to foreign correspondents on the elaborate preparations under way at the Wilhelmstrasse and Soviet embassies.

While it was rumored the Nazis may enable Molotov to visit Berlin without losing face, there was no indication from Italy that the Fascist regime is taking a more kindly view towards the Bolsheviks.

Holland Protests To Order Violations

THE HAGUE, March 29.—The Netherlands government protested to both London and Berlin yesterday over violations of Netherlands territory by warplanes.

A communication said that two British planes flew over the island of Rotterdam, off the northeast coast Thursday afternoon. They disappeared in a westerly direction after they were fired on from the ground.

A German plane also was sighted over Rotterdam Thursday afternoon, according to the statement.

Glancing Back 55 Years: Intense fighting in the Carpathian mountains gave Russia command of the Dnieper and Lyschak passes and entry to the Hungarian plain. On the Western Front Allied troops made gains in the Champagne and in the Vosges mountains.

ACTION FILMS HELP TO TEACH R. A. F. FLIERS

LONDON, March 30.—British fliers are learning fighting tactics from action films taken during dog fights in the air against enemy aircraft.

One such film, taken from the attacking British machine, shows the interception and shooting down of a German raider.

The device consists of a motion picture camera lined up with the fighter pilot's eyesight. It operates automatically when the trigger button sets the right guns in action. The pilot takes the finger off the trigger, the guns cease firing—without the pilot taking his hands off the controls. It operates with great speed of fire.

When the pilot sees this visual record of just what happened in the air, it gives him a better understanding of the enemy's tactics and the type of ammunition used.

626 Contracts Let For Army Supplies
OTTAWA, March 30.—The war supply board announced last night that 626 contracts, valued at $1,738,151, were let during the past week. Major portions of orders were for purchase of aircraft supplies at a cost of $1,184,156.

By now that the British were engaged in a war which to them "is a great cause, a splendid act of courage, a magnificent example of high endeavor and high purpose," he said, he felt it his duty to make known to the world his arguments used against them which he had made.

But now that this war was being fought, he said, he felt it his duty to make known to the world his arguments used against them which he had made.

Of the argument that the British were fighting to retain dominion of world trade, he wrote: "The world trade of Britain was never challenged by Germany. If world trade were the object of British making war when the enemy would be on the other side of the Atlantic and Pacific. Such a notion is preposterous. In any case world trade cannot be sustained by war, but only damaged. The English know that perfectly well."

Another charge was, "Why did you not go to the aid of Poland as you promised to do?" Britain promised nothing of the sort, he declared. "The British promise was to go to war with Germany if Poland were attacked, and Britain has gone to war with Germany."

U.S. COULD HAVE AIDED
Then there was the question, "Why did you not help the Finns?" Britain did not help the Finns because the Norwegians and the Swedes would not allow the British to cross their territories, and there was no other means of getting to Finland.

"There was no more reason to help Finland with British resources than with American resources. And it would have been much easier for the Americans to send help than for the English to do so. For the Germans would not have dared to put impediments in the way of the United States. They would certainly not have realized an American intervention. And neither the Norwegians nor the Swedes could have claimed that the main purpose of the United States was to help herself and not Finland."

Lord Beaverbrook then listed the charges: "You have a big empire and you make use of it to exploit the natives." His reply was that the war against the English is not that they exploit the natives but that they fail to exploit the empire. In doing so they neglect the natives.

If you want to take this big empire away from the British, where do you choose to place responsibility for the failure? The other nations have a capacity for colonization equal to that of the British Empire.

ARISTOCRATIC HELP
Of the charge that British wants to drag neutral nations into the war, he said: "The British want to say the chief wants to rid the world of a threat, and in the face of the fact that he has not yet subdued the world. So postpone the charge until the crime is committed."

The assertion that Britain is covered by a huge moon drawn from a group of aristocratic families is true, Lord Beaverbrook wrote. "But it is an aristocracy of political heritage under the influence of a democratic vote responsible to the voters and required to pursue a course that meets with public approval."

"The system is based in large measure on justice. But better than that, it is based on the privilege of government that adventures who make money out of it. I am not a socialist. I have no sympathy for the poor. But I do not see that they are useful in a democracy."

The Provincial Outcome

A week after the votes were polled it was definitely ascertained that the Aberhart Government would have 30 or more members in the new legislature.

This means that the Government has been sustained and will have a majority large enough to pass its budgets and carry its policies into effect. The province escaped the quite apparent possibility of a stalled legislature, and may look for stability of government and a reasonable time before another election is necessary, perhaps the full five year term for which a legislature is entitled to sit under the provincial law as it now is.

The opposition forces will be substantially stronger in numbers than they were in the last assembly. They include men drawn from many occupations and widely-separated parts of the province, are well qualified to offer constructive criticism of Government measures, and will be strong enough numerically to offer effective opposition when they think that to be called for.

The last legislature was too one-sided. The new one is better balanced and more nearly represents a cross-section of public opinion.

Josef Should Worry

The thanks of the Allies are due to whoever it was who sent out a report about a month ago from a west Mexican port saying that cargoes of U. S. copper and other materials useful in war were being sent from that port to Vladivostok. The amounts of the shipments were sufficient hint that they were destined for Germany, via Russia's back door route.

One of these vessels, with a cargo worth $2,000,000, has been intercepted by a British warship and escorted into Hong Kong. That copper will not go into Nazi shell-cases, nor the alloy metals be used to strengthen Nazi gun-steel. The Allied blockade it is to be inferred has been extended to Vladivostok, and further boot-legging operations by way of Mexico and that port will be as likely to help the Allies as Germany.

A London official observes there has been no break in Britain's relations with Russia because of this interruption of its brokerage and forwarding business in U. S. metals destined for the Reich partner. Still, it may be gathered, collects in advance and on the basis of f.o.b. San Pedro, leaving Hitler to do the worrying if the metals he has paid for do not arrive. Josef knows Adolf, and has no partiality for him except when the Fuehrer is useful to him. So long as Russia gains it all one to the Soviet which of the well-organizers gets the copper—or wins the war.

The Snows of March

Official investigators have come to the conclusion that a heavy winter snowfall does much less than has been supposed to put moisture into the ground and ensure quick germination when the crops are sown. Most of the water from the melting snow, they say, runs away before the ground thaws out, and does little more than fill up lakes and sloughs for summer use and evaporation. The exception of course is a season in which the ground is not frozen when snow comes in the fall, and is thus in condition to absorb the snow-water when the spring thaw occurs.

As the investigation was conducted over several years, and in a part of the west where spring moisture is likely to make the difference between a crop and no crop, the conclusion is no doubt correct, though it runs counter to a very prevalent and long-standing supposition.

The present seems to be one of the exceptional seasons. In this part of the west at least the frost has not penetrated deeply. The ten days of almost constant snowfall which came in the middle of March may therefore be counted a positive benefit, particularly if the thawing is gradual enough to allow the water to seep downward instead of running away in the streams.

At Edmonton the snowfall during March broke a 21-year record, and amounted to 28 inches. About as much as sometimes falls in a single night in the Ottawa valley and along the St. Lawrence. Maybe what we needed was one of the "real" snow-storms which have been blocking roads and railways in sections of eastern Canada.

Other Considerations Do Not Count

It is safe to assume that every city, town and village in Canada would welcome the establishment of a school or flying field of the Commonwealth Air Training scheme in its vicinity. News comes from Ottawa that there is a keen desire for immediate announcements as to where these are to be located; and a plain intimation that the anxious ones will have to exercise patience, as the plans are being worked out with an eye to efficiency and not to the distribution of favors.

It is very much to the credit of Canadian public men, and of the Canadian public as well, that no attempt was made and none was invited to make the location of schools and training fields a political factor in the recent elections. The training scheme will cost $600,000,000. Canada supplying most of the money. When before was any comparable expenditure in prospect at election time without the distribution of the benefits being made an issue in the campaign? The voters did not ask where these schools and fields are to be located; nor did candidates appeal for support by promising to back local claims to be logical places for such establishments.

Unlike by the voters and by the candidates the training scheme was accepted as something too vitally important to be made the victim of a scramble for the unthought advantages which will come to centres at which large expenditures will be made and large staffs of instructors mustered.

The plan is being evolved with the sole idea in mind that of providing the best facilities possible for training airmen of this and the other Dominions. With that idea the voters showed they are in complete agreement. They want the schools and fields located where in the opinion of the experts they ought to be.

Ottawa will have the solid approval of the public generally in telling the minority of anxious enquirers to "wait and see".

Herr Goebbels evidently forgot to put the Canadian election returns on the Nazi air.

The annual exhibition of the Edmonton Art Club opened Thursday at the civic block and will continue to the end of next week, Sunday excepted. The object is to encourage local artists, and only their work is eligible for entry. The first exhibition was held in 1921, and the event has gained steadily in interest among art-lovers.

The Passing Show

By MAX FREEDMAN

The brief reports of Hore-Belisha's speeches on Finland did not do justice to the retired war minister. He was made to speak like one eager to have Britain and France rally to the aid of the brave Finnish people simply out of hostility to Russia, and even war policies which are in a general fight. The text of his BASIC ISSUE argument, as covered in British papers, is a different and better light.

He was anxious to help Finland, not only because he thought that nation was fighting a brave battle for democratic rights, but also because he felt Norway and Sweden would help the Allied powers if they took a firm stand against aggression.

He pointed out that under the terms of the League covenant both Norway and Sweden were bound to permit safe passage to the troops or fleet of any League member taking action against a state judged guilty of unprovoked aggression. He felt certain such passage would be granted if Britain and France invoked the authority of the League for this purpose.

Neutral states, now cowering beneath the shadow of Nazi domination, would be stiffened in their struggle for independence by this proof of British and French determination to see the rights of small peoples preserved from extinction by brute force.

Further, according to Hore-Belisha, intervention in Finland would have served the Allied cause by the means by which it would have thereby depriving her of an essential source of supply.

The argument now belongs to the might-have-been of history. Finland has been abandoned. Russia has won, and Norway and Sweden still chart an enigmatic course on their own.

What are bonds now an idle irrelevancy, written and not all the argument in the world can stop people reading it. Besides, on grounds of national policy, it is far better that a responsible member of the cabinet should have evidence which it can do much to mould the course of events, than that his views should be read in the archives of the Foreign Office and be read years from now by scholars, when the events they describe have become mere dust on the man of history.

Writing this intimate book of memoirs on his faithful mission to Germany is another of those calculated and daring indiscretions Sir Neville has made details of his life.

Current Comment

A Real National Government

The triumph of the Government registered in such over-whelming fashion by voters from coast to coast is satisfactory on two main respects. It is, in the first place, an emphatic endorsement of Canada's entrance into the war and her war policies which can be misinterpreted in no corner of the world. It is also a decisive rebuke to the derisive and unscrupulous tactics employed by the main opposition spokesmen. So stinging is the punishment that it will be the hope of every decent Canadian that hereafter no such unscrupulous glances and mudslinging will disgrace our election campaigns.

The folly which led the Conservative party astray in this regard has, of course, led to an election result which is, in another respect, unsatisfactory. Parliament has now been deprived of an essential for efficient functioning—a strong and well-officer opposition representative of all parts of the Dominion with a personnel capable of supplying an alternative government. The character of the campaign robbed the country of this hope, for no Canadian of self-respect and intelligence could be blamed for casting his vote for a government candidate. The electors were indeed left with almost no choice.

The Government support is now so general and national in complexion that, while it may bear the Liberal label, it is by every test that counts, a "national government." It has, in some respects, the right to call itself a coalition, for hundreds of thousands of the votes cast in its favor came from electors who are not, and never will be, members of the Liberal party. It is to vote as they did because they resented the kind of campaign that had been waged and because they were not at all sure that the Liberal party was the best government to have. Mr. King and his colleagues when they announced their watchword of "no politics for the Liberals" the Government had no choice but to remain there the highest obligation to maintain that honorable pledge now so generally endorsed.

To this end, however, there is need for a marked degree of independence and watchfulness inside the Liberal party ranks. Liberal support is a broad-based support, but it is not a party triumph but a determination by their constituents to have at Ottawa an administration that will subordinate everything to the winning of the war. A Frightened Neutral

The British people are becoming more than a little annoyed at what appears to be Norway's one-sided neutrality. Norway is protesting all the while that it is a neutral state, and that its course and course across Norwegian territory, a complaint is filed, and constant reminders are sent to the British government to keep it out of its own affairs. Britain was even told the other day of the sad case of a German trader which felt itself threatened by a British destroyer while within the Norwegian three-mile limit.

So far as is known, Norway is making no protest against the German submarine campaign. German submarines and aircraft have destroyed sixty Norwegian ships, great and small, and have caused the death of 400 Norwegian sailors. Only yesterday the Norwegian steamship Fausfeldt reached Oslo with a story of having been attacked four times by German bombers while crossing the North Sea. Since the war began, on the other hand, no Norwegian ship has been sunk by the British or French and no Norwegian has lost his life as a result of Allied activities.

Under the circumstances, it would seem that Norwegian sympathies should be on the side of the Allies. One does not know what they are. But the protests go the other way. Really, though, it is a bit paradoxical. Norway's action is a compliment to Great Britain, instead of the reverse.

Norway trusts Britain and does not trust Germany. She does not protest to Germany because it is a neutral state. One does not know what she is talking to a stone wall or a mountain. Besides, she is afraid of Germany and does not wish to be a British ally. She trusts Britain and does not wish to be a British ally. She trusts Britain and does not wish to be a British ally.

Edmonton Regiment Most

Cosmopolitan Outfit in

Canada's First Division

By SAM ROBERTSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

ALBESHEROT, Eng., March 30.—Scratch a member of the Edmonton Regiment and there is no telling what nationality you will find represented under the khaki battle dress.

He may be a German—Private Alphonse Pratchi who fought against the Canadians at Vimy in 1918—or a Canadian of German extraction. He may be a Japanese or a full-blooded Indian. Or again he may have come of stock of all most any of the many nations making up Europe.

But there is one thing that is true of all these men: they are all Canadians.

More than 10,000 men of the Edmonton Regiment are now in the front lines of the battle of France.

The Edmonton outfit appears to be the most cosmopolitan of the units composing the Canadian Expeditionary Force. It truly represents the varied cross-section of nationalities found in Alberta.

Of the Old World countries having fought in the "E.F." the Edmonton outfit has men from 15 different nations.

Decorated with hunting in honor of the occasion, the engine presented a most unusual appearance as it arrived at the station, where Engineer Cudoba was met by many friends and relatives.

Engineer Cudoba, whose presence was to extend good wishes and hearty congratulations.

J. J. Mackay, superintendent of the Edmonton division, G. J. Leach, divisional engineer, and G. T. Jackson, company agent at St. Mary's, were among those on hand to greet Engineer Cudoba.

Entering the company's service in 1908 on the Alberta district, Cudoba has remained in this territory ever since, and in consequence is well known and popular in this part of the province.

Mr. Cudoba and his family will be in Calgary for the funeral which takes place at St. Mary's, Calgary, at 2 p.m. Saturday, March 30.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

JUST SUPPOSING...
THE 1940 OLYMPIC GAMES WERE BEING HELD ON THE MOON!

ASTON-
DING
RECORDS WOULD BE MADE.

POLE

ONE OF THE THOUSANDS OF CIRCULAR
CRATERS FOUND ON THE MOON WOULD MAKE AN EXCELLENT NATURAL STADIUM, OR LUNAR BOWL.

by
WILLIAM
KERSHAW

BASEBALL PITCHERS
COULD NOT THROW CURVES
BECAUSE THERE IS NO
AIR RESISTANCE, AND
BATTERS COULD CLOUT
BALLS A HALF-MILE.

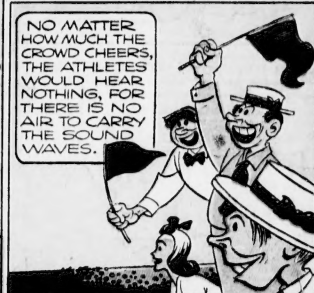

BROAD JUMPER'S
WOULD HAVE TO MAKE AROUND 150 FEET
TO QUALIFY.

THE GAMES COULD RUN OFF IN A DAY,
SINCE THERE
ARE ABOUT
300 HOURS
FROM
TO

NO

NO GAMES
WOULD BE POSTPONED
BECAUSE OF STORMY
FOR THE MOON HAS NO
WEATHER.

NO MATTER
HOW MUCH THE CROWD CHEERS,
THE ATHLETES
WOULD HEAR
NOTHING, FOR
THERE IS NO
AIR TO CARRY
THE SOUND
WAVES.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

THERE'S NOT MUCH
ACTION TO THAT...
I LIKE SOMETHIN'
TAME... LIKE FLYIN'
BESSIE HERE!

NOT FOR ME, MOM...
I LIKE SOMETHIN'
TAME... LIKE FLYIN'
BESSIE HERE!

THOSE KIDS CAN HAVE THEIR OLD BASEBALL...
I'LL TAKE BESSIE AND
SIT UNDER A TREE
AND ENJOY
MYSELF!

COME ON, BESSIE, UP
WITH YA... DAWGONE...
WHERE'S TH' WIND?
C'MON, BESSIE!!

GEE, SHE ALMOST
